

What is claimed is:

1. A voice call originating method in a radio terminal comprising:
 - a step of receiving a message;
 - 5 a step of identifying a telephone number included in the message; and
 - a step of designating directly the identified telephone number and performing a voice call origination.
- 10 2. The method of claim 1, wherein the step of performing the voice call origination comprises:
 - a step of designating the telephone number included in the message by operating a browsing key on the radio terminal; and
 - a step of originating the voice call to the designated telephone number.
- 15 3. The method of claim 2, wherein the browsing key is a navigator key which is able to move a cursor displayed on the radio terminal to upward, downward, left and right directions.
- 20 4. The method of claim 2 further comprising a step of deciding whether or not the designated telephone number should be edited.
- 25 5. A voice call originating method in a radio terminal comprising:
 - a step of receiving a message through the radio terminal;
 - a step of identifying a telephone number included in the transmitted message;

a step of designating the identified telephone number using a browsing key on the radio terminal;

a step of deciding whether or not the designated telephone number should be edited; and 5 a step of performing a voice call origination to the designated telephone number.

6. The method of claim 5, wherein the designated telephone number is corrected by using a key pad of the radio terminal in case that the telephone 10 number needs to be edited.

7. The method of claim 5, wherein the designation of the telephone number is made by locating the browsing key designated in the radio terminal and pushing a send key.

15 8. The method of claim 5, wherein the voice call transmission step is performed by pushing the send key on the radio terminal.